A Vote of Thanks from our Country Director

Dear Friends, Partners and Supporters,

Greetings from Uganda! As I look back on 2025, my heart is full of gratitude. This was a year in which your generosity reached further than ever before — into classrooms, into homes that now draw clean water, into health workshops, and into the lives of women who stepped confidently into new livelihoods.

Together we kept 119 children and young people in school, delivered five boreholes and two water wells that now serve more than 22,000 people in over 7,211 homes, celebrated 27 EmpowerHer graduates, and joined hands with the Church to build Namunkanaga Health Center. None of it would have been possible without you.

To our donors, churches, corporate partners, the Iganga District Local Council, our local leaders and our tireless field team: thank you for walking this journey with us. Every dollar, every prayer and every hour you gave became hope for a family in Eastern Uganda.

As we enter 2026, we carry forward the lessons of this year with humility and resolve — so that more children learn, more families drink safe water and more mothers build a future. Thank you for being part of the Divine Hearts family.

With gratitude and blessings,

Margret Nalumaga

Stewarding every gift

In 2025 our supporters entrusted Divine Hearts Foundation with $130,999.48 in combined cash and in-kind contributions. More than half of that value came as in-kind gifts — donated services, materials and hands-on labour — which allowed every cash dollar to go further in the field.

Cash gifts funded tuition, scholastic materials and school requirements for our sponsored students, the siting and drilling of new boreholes and wells, EmpowerHer training, community health workshops and the logistics that make our outreaches possible.

Why in-kind giving matters

In-kind partners such as Hostalite and 4imprint provide what we would otherwise have to buy: secure web hosting and digital tools, branded materials that grow our visibility, and professional skills. Community members and church partners contributed labour at Namunkanaga Health Center. These gifts are valued at their fair market equivalent.

We remain committed to the transparency reflected in our Candid Platinum Seal, and we share our goals, finances and results openly with every partner.

PROGRAM REPORT

Education & Sponsorship: 119 Futures in Motion

Education remains the heart of everything we do. In 2025, Divine Hearts Foundation sponsored 119 students — more than three and a half times the 33 we supported in 2023.

Our Education & Sponsorship Program identifies vulnerable children — orphans, children of single mothers and children from households living on subsistence farming — and walks with them from primary school through secondary, vocational training and, for some, university. Sponsorship covers tuition and school requirements, and every child is followed up by our social worker and field officers.

More than school fees

Throughout the year our team visited schools and homes to review each child's attendance, discipline and academic progress, and to meet teachers and guardians. Where a child was struggling, we worked with the family to find solutions — from counselling to scholastic materials — so that no child quietly dropped out.

Sponsorship keeps girls in school longer, protects children from child labour and early marriage, and gives families hope that the cycle of poverty can be broken within a single generation.

The need is still great

Across Uganda, only about half of children complete primary school, and just one in four completes lower secondary. Rural children in Busoga face the steepest barriers: school fees, long distances, hunger and household chores. Hundreds of children remain on our waiting list for a sponsor.

At $191 per term, one sponsor can change the direction of a child's life. As our 119 students advance, we are seeing the fruit: stronger grades, growing confidence and young people who dream of becoming nurses, engineers, teachers and doctors.

The ripple effect of one educated child

Research by the World Bank consistently finds that each additional year of schooling raises a person's future earnings, with some of the highest returns in Sub-Saharan Africa. For girls, every extra year in the classroom is linked to later marriage, healthier children and greater say in household decisions.

We see this in our own alumni. Nassuna Milka Patricia, once a sponsored child, trained as an enrolled midwife and today serves as a Divine Hearts field officer, helping the next generation of sponsored children find their way.

Our 2026 commitments

- Keep all 119 current students enrolled and progressing to the next class.
- Match more children on our waiting list with sponsors, prioritising orphans and girls.
- Strengthen termly progress reports so every sponsor sees the difference they make.
- Grow mentorship, career guidance and vocational pathways for older students.

Sponsor a child today at divineheartsfoundation.org — $191 a term, a lifetime of difference.

Esther, 12
Primary Six · Namungalwe village

Dear Sponsors and Friends,

My name is Esther. Before Divine Hearts found me, I used to stay home when my grandmother could not pay school fees. I would dig in the garden while my friends went to school. This year I did not miss a single term. I also have books and a new uniform.

Now there is a borehole near our home, so I no longer walk far to fetch water before school. I want to become a nurse so I can help mothers and babies in my village. Thank you for loving me. May God bless you.

Dear Divine Hearts Family,

I lost my father when I was nine, and my mother sells vegetables in the market to take care of five of us. When I finished Primary Seven, I thought my education had ended. Then Divine Hearts told my mother I could join secondary school.

I am now in Senior Two and I love mathematics and physics. My dream is to become an engineer and build good roads and bridges for Busoga. I promise to work hard so that your help is not wasted. Thank you very much.

Dear Sponsor,

Hello! My name is Mercy and I am in Primary Four. I am happy because this year I learnt to read English storybooks. My teacher says I am one of the best readers in my class.

Thank you for my school fees, my books and my shoes. When I grow up I want to be a teacher, so I can teach other children to read like me. I pray for you every night. I love you.

Dear Friends of Divine Hearts,

This year I sat my Senior Four examinations, something no one in my family has done before. Without sponsorship I would be riding a boda boda today instead of preparing for Advanced Level.

The home visits by Aunt Zion and the Divine Hearts team encouraged me when I wanted to give up. I want to study medicine and one day serve at a health center in my own community. Thank you for believing in me.

WATER, SANITATION & HYGIENE (WASH)

Clean & Safe Water: 7 Water Points, 22,000+ Lives

In 2025, Divine Hearts Foundation prepared five boreholes and two water wells in the villages of Butiiki, Namulesa, Nasuuti, Namungalwe and Kigulu. Together they now provide clean, safe water to more than 7,211 homes and over 22,000 people.

For many of these families, the nearest reliable water used to be an open spring, a swamp or a seasonal pond shared with animals. Children — especially girls — spent hours each day carrying jerrycans instead of sitting in class, and cases of diarrhoea, typhoid and skin infections were a constant burden on households and clinics alike.

Community-led from the start

Each water point was sited with village leaders and local councils, and each community formed a water user committee to manage fair access, simple repairs and cleanliness around the source. Our field team trained households on safe water storage, hand-washing and latrine hygiene, so that clean water stays clean all the way to the cup.

What changes when water is near

- More time in school. Children arrive on time and stay for lessons instead of walking to distant sources.
- Better health. Safe water cuts water-borne diseases, reducing medical costs for families.
- Stronger livelihoods. Mothers reclaim hours for farming, small businesses and EmpowerHer training.
- Safety and dignity. Women and girls no longer walk long distances alone at dawn or dusk.

Seven water points serving more than 22,000 people also shows how great the need remains: each source serves thousands of neighbours. More boreholes will ease queues, reduce wear on the pumps and reach families still drinking from open sources.

VOICES OF COMMUNITY LEADERS

A Vote of Thanks from our Local Leaders

Chairperson, LC I
Namungalwe Village
Representative photo

On behalf of the people of Namungalwe, I thank Divine Hearts Foundation from the bottom of our hearts.

For many years our people drew water from open sources that made our children sick. Mothers woke before dawn and walked long distances with jerrycans, and many children reached school late or not at all. Today we have clean and safe water close to our homes. Cases of stomach illness have gone down, and our women have time to farm, trade and attend the EmpowerHer trainings.

Divine Hearts did not only bring water — they came with respect. They sat with our village council, listened to our needs and helped us form a water committee to care for the source. Several of our children are also in school through their sponsorship program.

We pray that God continues to bless the Foundation and all its partners, and we welcome them to walk with us again.

Divine Hearts Foundation has become a true partner of government in Kigulu.

As leaders, we are responsible for the health, education and welfare of our people, yet resources are always limited. This year Divine Hearts stood in the gap. Their boreholes and wells now serve thousands of families across our villages, and their healthcare workshops — held together with the Iganga District Local Council — taught our communities how to prevent disease before it strikes.

We have seen their team at Namunkanaga, giving labour to build a health center that will save mothers and children the long journey to Iganga town. We have seen them bring food, clothing and school fees to families who had lost hope.

On behalf of the people and leadership of Kigulu, I say thank you. Our doors remain open to Divine Hearts and to every partner who wishes to join this good work.

ECONOMIC EMPOWERMENT

EmpowerHer: 27 Women, 27 New Beginnings

In 2025 our EmpowerHer Women's Program celebrated 27 successful graduates — mothers, widows and young women who completed hands-on training and left with a marketable skill, a plan and a network of sisters to lean on.

EmpowerHer grew out of a simple observation: when a mother earns, her children eat, stay in school and see a better future. The program combines vocational skills such as tailoring, crafts and agribusiness with practical lessons in saving, record-keeping, pricing and customer care.

From trainees to entrepreneurs

Graduates are now sewing school uniforms, mending clothes, weaving baskets and mats for sale, and growing surplus crops for local markets. Many have joined savings groups, where small weekly contributions build the capital for a sewing machine, a market stall or livestock.

Just as important is confidence. Women who once felt invisible now speak up in village meetings, keep records of their income and mentor the next group of trainees.

Looking ahead

In 2026 we aim to link graduates with start-up kits, micro-savings support and new markets — and to open EmpowerHer to more women in the villages where our boreholes have freed up time once spent fetching water.

COMMUNITY HEALTH

Healthcare Workshops in Kigulu & Nasuuti

Prevention is the most affordable medicine. In 2025, Divine Hearts Foundation held community healthcare workshops in Kigulu and Nasuuti villages, bringing practical health knowledge to families who live far from a health facility.

We are deeply grateful to the Iganga District Local Council, whose health teams journeyed with us — sharing expertise, mobilising residents and linking families to government health services.

What the workshops covered

- Safe water handling, hand-washing and household sanitation
- Preventing malaria, diarrhoea and other common illnesses
- Nutrition for children, expectant and breastfeeding mothers
- Maternal and child health, immunisation and when to seek care
- Basic health screening and referrals to nearby facilities

Why it matters

Uganda has roughly one doctor for every 5,200 people, and rural families often travel long distances to reach care. Teaching households to prevent disease — and recognising danger signs early — saves lives and money long before anyone reaches a clinic.

The workshops also strengthened our WASH work: the families who now draw water from our new boreholes learned how to keep it safe from source to cup.

PARTNERSHIP IN HEALTH

Building Namunkanaga Health Center

In partnership with The United Methodist Church in Iganga and the Uganda, Sudan & South Sudan Annual Conference, Divine Hearts Foundation provided labour for the construction of Namunkanaga Health Center.

Namunkanaga, in Kigulu, is home to many of the children in our sponsorship program. Until now, a sick child or a mother in labour has faced a long and costly journey to reach care, often on foot or by boda boda over rough roads, and sometimes at night.

Hands, hearts and faith

Our staff, volunteers and community members worked side by side with the Church — clearing the site, carrying materials and supporting the builders. Giving labour kept costs down and gave the community true ownership of the facility from the first brick.

What the center will mean

- Medical care close to home for Namunkanaga and the surrounding villages
- Safer pregnancies and deliveries, with antenatal care nearby
- Faster treatment of malaria, diarrhoea and pneumonia in children
- A base for immunisation and health education outreaches

Uganda's maternal mortality ratio remains about 170 deaths per 100,000 live births. Bringing a health center within walking distance is one of the surest ways to change that for the families we serve.

essentials: food, clothing & shoes — plus school fees

"We are so thankful for this outreach, but there is still so much more that our community needs." — Kigulu resident

Divine Hearts Foundation carried out a transformative outreach in Kigulu village, delivering essential support to 284 people across 71 families. Led by our staff Margret Nalumaga and Suzan Nabirye, together with two dedicated team members, the outreach distributed non-perishable food, clothing and shoes to families facing severe need. The Foundation also covered school fees for several children in our Education Sponsorship Program so they could continue learning.

For many in Kigulu, the outreach came as a lifeline. Poverty, food insecurity and limited access to education remain everyday realities, and a bag of maize flour, beans and cooking oil can carry a family through weeks of a lean season.

During the visit, our team also met teachers at the schools our sponsored children attend, reviewing discipline and academic progress. At Bulanga Primary School, Deputy Headteacher Mr. Kintu Daniel praised God for the Foundation's efforts: "Divine Hearts Foundation is making a significant impact on education in Eastern Uganda. We are grateful for their support in helping our children thrive and grow into responsible citizens."

This outreach was made possible by the United Methodist Women of Faith and members of First United Methodist Church in Horseheads, New York. Their generosity met immediate needs while investing in education — the long-term path out of poverty.

FEATURE · FROM OUR SOCIAL WORKER

The Heart of Social Work: Walking With Families

Zion Mutesi
Social Worker
Divine Hearts Foundation

"Every child who stays in school and every mother who finds her strength again reminds me why I was called to this work."

When people ask me what a social worker does at Divine Hearts Foundation, I tell them that I am the bridge between a family's story and the help that can change it. Behind every school fee we pay and every borehole we drill is a child, a grandmother or a young mother whose life is complicated in ways a report cannot capture. My job is to listen to those stories.

Why this work matters

Many of the children in our sponsorship program have lost one or both parents. Some live with elderly grandparents; others carry adult responsibilities long before their time. Paying school fees is essential, but it is not enough on its own. A child who is hungry, grieving or unsafe at home cannot learn.

Through home visits, school follow-ups and one-on-one counselling, I help identify the children most in need, assess their home situations and make sure each sponsored child is protected, supported and progressing. I link families to health services, local leaders and community resources, and I walk with them when crisis strikes — an illness, a death, a failed harvest.

What I have seen in 2025

This year, as our program grew to 119 students, I watched shy children become confident class leaders. I saw a teenage girl at risk of dropping out return to school and top her class. I met mothers from our EmpowerHer program who now pay part of their children's school requirements from their own tailoring and small businesses. And in villages like Kigulu and Namungalwe, I saw how clean water close to home changes the rhythm of a whole family's day.

How it has changed me

This work has shaped me as much as I hope it has shaped others. It has taught me patience, humility and the power of simply showing up. Some days are heavy — no one can sit with a child who has lost everything and walk away unchanged. But the joy of seeing that same child smile at a graduation, or hearing a guardian say "now we have hope," fills me with gratitude and renews my faith.

To every sponsor and partner: thank you for making this ministry of presence possible. You may never meet the families I visit, but they know that someone, somewhere, cares enough to stand with them.

Dear friends and partners of Divine Hearts,

I write to you with a grateful heart. I was once a sponsored child myself. Because someone chose to believe in me, I finished school, trained as an enrolled midwife and now serve my own people as a field officer. Every day in the field, I see my story being written again in the lives of other children.

In 2025, I walked the paths of Butiiki, Namulesa, Nasuuti, Namungalwe and Kigulu. I stood beside families as clean water flowed from new boreholes for the first time — mothers clapping, children splashing, elders praying. In homes where water once came from swamps, parents now tell me their children fall sick less often and reach school on time.

I followed up our sponsored students in their schools and homes, checking on attendance, results and wellbeing. I watched 27 women graduate from EmpowerHer and begin sewing, trading and farming for their families. At Namunkanaga, I saw our team carrying materials for a health center that will serve mothers like the ones I trained to help.

Your support is not just a donation — it is a child in uniform, a jerrycan of clean water and a mother with a skill. Thank you for trusting us to carry your kindness to the people.

To our donors, the Iganga District Local Council, our local leaders, churches and partners: thank you. Please keep walking with us.
